Scarcely anything excepting musical comedy has been able to survive the effects of the recent hot spell and the waning season. Seldom, if ever, have so many West End theaters been closed at this time. Another such season would reduce many managers to despair. Of the ten theaters now open in London four have musical comedy, one comic opera, two give comedy, two farce and one a Japanese drama. Commenting upon the American complaint that the American stage is mainly served with British plays, the dramatic critic of the Daily Mail says Americans will speedily have their revenge, as Beerbohm Tree, Julia Nielson and George Alexander are going to produce plays by Clyde Fitch, while Mr. Henderson, another American playwright, provides Charles Wyndham with his next attraction. Mr. Frohman is seeking a theater for production of "Are You a Mason?" The Lyceum Theater presents an American version of "Sherlock Holmes," while "Ben-Hur" is announced for production. Alice Nielson has confirmed the report that she is going into grand opera. Miss Nielson says she will go to Italy for two months' study of Italian and French and the study of two operas.
